DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

The factual inquiries set forth in Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 148 USPQ 459 (1966), that are applied for establishing a background for determining obviousness under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) are summarized as follows:

1. Determining the scope and contents of the prior art.
2. Ascertaining the differences between the prior art and the claims at issue.
3. Resolving the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art.
4. Considering objective evidence present in the application indicating obviousness or nonobviousness.

Claims 1-28 and 46-51 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Hendricks et al.

Hendricks et al. show in Figure 1, an advanced set top terminal for cable television delivery systems. The system has an operations center 202 (first storage, host side device, first sending/receiving (S/R) unit). The network controller acts as the retrieval unit, decision unit, reproduction unit and the second S/R. Column 20, line 36 shows that the controller can distinguish newly stored data. Supplementary data can be provided when user requests more (intent of user). Communication links allow requests and replies to be sent and received. Different audio quality can be achieved upon request (Figure 21 for CD quality audio option). Hendricks et al. also teach subscriber payments.

While Hendricks et al. teach essentially all the elements of the claimed invention with the exception of the system sends/ receives low-quality data when the user is not willing to make the payment as set forth in claims 1, 18 and 46. However, the examiner takes Official Notice that such a practice is old and well-known. For example it has been a long established practice to offer samples of proprietary work at a less than CD quality to entice a potential buyer; however, if the potential buyer refuse to make payment for the higher quality, only the lower quality data is available for sending. Accordingly, to adding to the system of Hendricks et al. with the capability of sending/receiving low-quality data when the user is not willing to make the payment would have been obvious for one having ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention since such a mortification would have enticed potential buyers to purchase the better quality material.

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1-28 and 46-51 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.
